Rather Fresh.

The following school-boy effusion was received a week ago by ex-alderman A. G. Watson and is published for what fools some of the "loopy do's."

"On papa's lap my hands and hollo' 'ameo' Journal of Agriculture."

A Plain Fact.

The teacher in geography was putting the class through a few simple tests.

"On which side of the earth is the north pole?" she inquired.

"On the north side," came the unanimous answer.

"On which side is the south pole?"

"On the south side."

"Now on which side are the most people?"

This was a poser and nobody answered. Finally a young scholar held up his hand.

"I know," he said, hesitatingly, as if the excess of his knowledge were too much for him.

"Good for you," said the teacher encouragingly; "tell the class on which side the most people are."

"On the outside," piped the youngster, and whatever answer the teacher had in her mind was lost in the shuffle.

Sand for the Children.

One of the cleanest and neatest playthings in the world for a little child is sand. In summer a load of it dumped in a clean spot in the back yard will amuse the little ones for hours each day. They love to shovel it, build miniature forts, make gardens, with grass or plants, and dig wells. Washed sand is as clean as sawdust, and a child can play in it in its white frocks and not soil its clothes. For winter playing a bushel of sand can be kept just outside the door. A shallow box of a few inches in depth and two or three feet square can be easily made. Spread a lot of newspapers on the floor, set the box in the middle, fill it with sand and let the children loose. Teach them not to get off the newspapers with it, and they will play all day in it and not litter the house half so much as though they had cut paper or scattered toys.

Two Little Stories.

A little boy walked into a candy store.

"You did not hear about that terrible cutting affray at the White house?" asked the clerk.

"Why, no," said the astonished boy.

"Well," she said, "Miss Ruth has cut her teeth."

Millie—Mamma, I didn't know that Mrs. Sloper had been sick. What has she been cured of?

Mother—What do you mean by such a question, dear?

Millie—Why, here's her picture in the paper.

At the Head of the Class.

Marie, who never knew her lessons, was speaking of one of her little schoolmates, who always stood at the head of her classes.

"I should like to be the father of such a little girl," said Marie's papa, wishing to point a moral.

"No you wouldn't, papa, said Marie. 'Why not?' asked papa.

"Because her father has been dead two years," said Marie.

Antioch Will Celebrate.

Lotus Camp, No. 557, M. W. A. of Antioch, will hold a grand celebration and basket picnic in the sylvan shades of Savage's Park in Antioch village, on Wednesday, July 4, 1894. The oration of the day will be delivered by Rev. Clarence Abel. Addresses will be made by other well-known speakers. The program of amusements will include sack races, wheelbarrow races, foot races, ladies' races, potato races, pie-eating contests, and other amusing features of interest. Prizes will be given on all contests of skill and endurance. A grand parade of fraternal and benevolent societies will be made at 10 o'clock a.m. A good brass band has been secured for the occasion. In the evening a grand display of fireworks will be given, followed by a grand ball at the Opera House. Games of all kinds will be furnished at the fair, and everything done to make this one of the best celebrations ever held in this part of the state. All come to Antioch on the 4th of July, and enjoy themselves.

CHAPTER I. BORN TO THE WHIRLWIND.

JOE, BE AT HOME when the clock strikes 12; don't forget, Joe."

These words, evidently repeated from another, were addressed to himself in the second person by a boy some 10 years old, as he passed along Sycamore street, counting on his fingers. "Don't forget, Joe; be at home when the clock strikes 12," repeated the boy. "Eleven, quarter-past eleven, half-past eleven, quarter to twelve," said he, at the same time taking the fingers of the right hand successively in those of the left as he told off the quarter hours. When he had reached the thumb he held it as if waiting for the expiration of the last quarter.

The boy was moving along as if controlled by some instinctive impulse, without any expression of self-consciousness in his handsome face. He entered the open door of the apothecary's shop which appeared familiar to him. The proprietor, Mr. Formula, who knew the boy, said kindly to him: "Come in and see the new store, Joe." Joe was shivering with the cold wintry blast, but Mr. Formula, knowing his peculiarities, avoided a direct invitation for the boy to warm himself, and humored his bent.

"Always say, 'thank you, sir,' Joe," said the boy with a gracious smile, holding the thumb of his right hand. Warning himself for a few minutes in silence, he then said: "Our needs blacking, Joe; keep everything nice and bright." Then giving his thumb a quick rub and looking at the clock, he said: "The clock strikes 12, don't forget, Joe." Then, as if he had been waiting for a signal, he stepped into the room and said: "Thank you, sir, I have not lost sight of him. It is a remarkable case; Joe is no idiot I am sure."

was called to aid in his recovery to now, I have not lost sight of him. It is a remarkable case; Joe is no idiot I am sure."

"A remarkable case of what, Doctor?" inquired Mr. Formula.

"I believe it is a clear case of double life," responded the doctor. "Up to the time of his drowning and resuscitation I believe Joe was a bright and intelligent boy; everything about the boy shows that. And I think his young life was covered up by that catastrophe—probably never again to be revealed."

"Do you mean, Doctor, that he lost his senses in the water?"

"I mean that his self-consciousness and all memory of his previous life were extinguished together and he began life anew, like an infant."

"Why, Doctor, does that ever happen?"

"Yes, it has sometimes happened before, and I am quite convinced it has happened to Little Joe. When Mr. Gust poured the water out of the boy's lungs and started his respiration, he could say but two or three words—'Mother' and 'Little Joe.'"

"He says but little more now," responded Mr. Formula, "except parrot-like, to repeat what others say."

"But he is learning," replied Dr. Ross, "and his words are not ill-formed like those of an idiot. They are distinctly uttered in well assured tones, indicating trained organs of speech. There is surely an interesting history behind that boy, if we knew what it is. He has once been the pet of some fond mother; and the first word he uttered after coming to himself in the storm was 'Mother!'"

"That is certainly very sad," said Mr. Formula. "Some gentleman was drowned in the same storm when the boy was saved, I believe; how was that?"

"It was his father who was drowned; it was a terrible affair. I had been out to the Four-mile house to visit a patient, and as I stepped into my gig to return I saw down toward the within: "One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve!" Then saying: "Joe, you are just in time," he entered the house, ran smiling to a lady whom he called mother, and gave her a kiss and waited for her to speak. "Where did you go, Joe?" inquired the lady in a kindly tone, at the same time talking off the boy's cap and mittens and seating him by a warm fire.

"Joe went to the river, but the fun was all over," replied the boy with a merry laugh. "They found the boy that was drowned before Joe got there!"

"Was there really a boy drowned, Joe?" Mother told Joe to keep off the ice."

"Yes," said the boy; "mother told Joe to keep off the ice. Joe wasn't drowned."

"No, I see that you were not drowned," (with a smile) "who was it, Joe?"

"Mother told Joe to keep off the ice, but the fun was all over and it's Shannon's boy."

"Did you see him drown, Joe?"

"Joe didn't see him drown; the fun was all over; ha, ha, ha! It was Shannon's boy; mother told Joe to keep off the ice."

The lady, despairing of further details, asked the boy where he went next.

"Went to Shannon's; quarter-past eleven."

"What did you say at Shannon's?"

"Told her the fun was all over; told her they were bringing her boy home in the wagon, and he was drowned."

"What did she do?"

"She screamed."

"Why, Joe—was her boy really drowned?"

"She screamed 'cause the fun was all over," replied Joe.

The "fun" which the poor boy had said was all over proved to be indeed the drowning of a boy in the river by the breaking of the ice. Joe had seen the crowd, witnessed the excitement and the recovery of the body, and had started up Sycamore street toward home, telling all he met that "the fun was all over." To his clouded mind excitement of any kind meant "fun," and his merry laugh was rippling like a summer brook on the slightest provocation.

INDUSTRIAL WORLD.

SOME INVENTIONS FOR SAVING TIME AND LABOR.

A Typewriter Device by Which the Operator May Read the Letters as They Are Being Printed—An Improved Steam Actuated Valve.

Device for Typewriters.

One of the annoying features of several of the most deservingly popular of the typewriting machines is the fact that the carriage has frequently to be lifted, that the operator may examine the work as it progresses. The necessity for this is obviated by a simple device recently introduced and styled the "Typewriter Prism," a rod of polished cut glass fastened to the carriage beneath the impression roller. Two of its sides are flat and inclined to each other at an angle of 45 degrees, and the third side is a strong cylindrical curve, perfectly reflecting the writing and presenting it right side up and in normal position to the eye of the operator.

The accompanying engraving illustrates the application of the improvement to the Smith-Premier machine, the position of the prism being shown by dotted lines on and in a broken-away portion of the impression roller. The prism can also be adjusted with respect to the Remington, Calligraph and Yost machines.

The prism in no way interferes with the operation of the machine, and when a letter has been omitted or a wrong letter struck, the carriage can be instantly moved to the desired point and the correction made without lifting the carriage to locate the error, while it is the only device yet invented enabling the operator to tabulate conveniently.

Skins of Fruit.

The skins of fruit should never be eaten because they are not palatable, and are often unhealthy in themselves, but on account of the danger from microbes which have penetrated into the covering of the body has noticed that at night scratch will create a sore on the human body.

congress was asked to establish a national zoological park at Washington. The appropriations asked for were very moderate, but in all cases they were cut down. Thus, $30,850 was asked for to erect the necessary buildings; congress reduced this estimate to $18,000. In this connection it may be noticed that, in Philadelphia, the amount expended for buildings and inclosures was $104,705. The result of this parsimony has been that expedients of a temporary character were adopted, which have proved far from economical. Notwithstanding the inadequacy of the appropriations, the results achieved are highly satisfactory and reflect great credit upon the Smithsonian Institution and its officers. The park, which occupies forty acres, can be reached by Ontario avenue. The total number of animals in the park is 418, of which 340 are indigenous to North America. Fifty-five of the animals were obtained by purchase. The animal house, a stone structure, is the principal building. The bear yards are in an abandoned quarry. As congress has saddled a portion of the expenses both for construction and maintenance upon the District of Columbia, it is little wonder that the new park is largely frequented by residents of the district. Strangers are, however, beginning to visit the park in fair numbers. Scientific American.

How to Give a Fomentation.

Only those who have not tried the remedial effects of water, both hot and cold, doubt the efficacy in many forms of disease. It is perfectly safe to apply a fomentation in case of severe pain before a physician is summoned, and very often it relieves the sufferer before he arrives. This is the way to do it: Take half a dozen thick pieces of flannel large enough to more than cover the seat of the pain, fasten them together, for convenience in handling, with them out of very hot water, (use a clothes wringer to save the hands) and apply as hot as the patient can bear it. A dry flannel may be put between the skin and the wet cloth, if preferred, and over all a large flannel should be placed to keep the heat in. When the cloth begins to feel cold, it should be wrung again. Three or four applications will generally relieve a stiff neck or an attack of rheumatism in a joint.

A fomentation may be needed when there is no hot water in the house. It may be quickly prepared by wringing out the flannel compress in cold water, laying it between the folds of newspaper and putting it on a hot stove or holding it around a stove pipe until hot. The paper protects the cloth, and when steam begins to come out can be easily removed.

Wanted to Grow Something. Anyway

In the debate on the agricultural appropriation bill in the national house recently, Representative Pickler of South Dakota had read the following letter from a constituent, which, he said, illustrated the general demand for seeds and plants from the department. The reading vastly amused the members of the house:

BRITTON, S. D., Jan. 31, 1894.

HON. JOHN A. PICKLER. DEAR SIR: My wife has been pestering me for some time to write to some member of congress for a batch of seeds—I mean such seeds as are sent out from the agricultural department. I presume you have nothing to do but help make a quorum and send out seeds to your hay-seed constituents. Now, I am one of your hay-seed constituents, or rather my wife is, as she is going to farm extensively the coming season, and we deem it but fair that we have our share, or rather my wife's share, of garden seeds. We want good, honest garden seeds, none of your back numbers. I would like some seventy-day corn, and if the administration has any new silver seed that will produce standard silver dollars, or even Mexican dollars, in about sixty days, I would like some of that. Our land is well adapted to the raising of silver. We would like something that would yield a thousand bushels to the acre and sell for a dollar a bushel. We have not farmed much, but are looking for anything new or profitable. Some of our friends say German carp is a good crop. We will put in a few acres of carp for a starter if we can get the seed. Some of our kind friends recommend ostriches, but they grow so few in a hill that we will not venture to try them. There is a small lake near our farm, and my wife is anxious to raise some gondolas. They are an Italian bird, I believe. The climate here is severe, but she thinks she could raise them by keeping them near a hard-wood burner in the winter season. If Mr. Morton could be prevailed upon to send us a pair of young ones we would esteem it a great favor. We could use some canvassback duck seed to good advantage. Mixed farming is talked of a good deal and some say our farm is just the thing for wool. I do not want Poland, China or Shorthorn wool seed. I would prefer Shanghai or Irish setter that would shear about twelve pounds to the vine. We want to try some hard coal seed this year, as we have paid $10 a ton for coal about as long as we care to. One of my young sons has a desire to raise a pair of elephants to break our land with. Do you think Mr. Morton would be willing to send us a couple of elephant eggs to try the experiment with? Some of our advanced thinkers advise me to raise a crop of plug tobacco. In selecting the seed I wish you would send "Spear Head," "Climate" or "Star." The climate is too dry for fine out. If the department has anything new in Jack rabbits I would like a few vines that would bear the second year. Thank you very much for your attention to this matter. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, J. A. Pickler.

In doing this we can loan to the manufacturer, and this will allow them to start up and give work to thousands. In keeping this money in your homes you are bidding for Robbery and Murder. THE LAND OF "PRETTY SOON."

I know of a land where the streets are paved with the things that we mean to achieve. It is called the land of "Pretty Soon."

And the pleasures for which we grieve. The kind words unspoken, the promises broken. And many a coveted boon. Are stowed away there in that land some-where.

The land of "Pretty Soon."

There are uncut jewels of possible fame. Lying about in the dust. And many a noble and lofty aim. Covered with mould and rust.

And oh, this place while it seems so near. Is farther away than the moon. Though our purpose be fair yet we never get there.

To the land of "Pretty Soon."

The road that leads to that mystic land. Is strewn with pitiful wrecks. And the ships that have sailed for its shining strand. Bear skeletons on their decks.

It is farther at night than it was at dawn. And farther at night than at noon. Oh, let us beware of that land down there—where "Pretty Soon" is.

—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

Catching a Cub.

When Uncle John asked Sister Mary and me to go camping with him in the Adirondacks, he promised that he would take good care of us, and bring us home in ten days with brown cheeks and big appetites.

We were just crazy to go, and begged so hard that mamma finally gave her consent, and off we went with Uncle John, Mr. Mason, Mr. Spear and a guide.

I ain't going to tell about our trip to the mountains, or about the little cabin we lived in, or how homesick we got at night. Mary and I had a fine time during the daylight, but when darkness came, and the wind sighed through the trees, we were awfully lonesome.

After we had been in camp four days all the men started off hunting one morning, leaving Lion, a shaggy bird dog, to keep us company while we fished for trout in a little stream near our cabin.

The fish didn't bite rapidly, or maybe we were poor fishers; any-ways we got tired, and leaving our lines started up the rough mountain trails in search of wild-flowers.

We went up and down the steep, rocky slopes, and in the city, the ward became widely known as heavy speculator on the Board of Trade in Chicago and New York.

A few of Wilson's commonweal-ers, from Montana, passed through here Monday night. They were escorted to the tramp house by two policemen and cared for for the night. The captain was interviewed and his views were found to be sim-ilar to Coxey's.

A reform lecture on the labor question was given Thursday and Friday evenings at the Congrega-tional church, by Geo. M. Ritchie. His remedy for the ills that have overtaken us is that every one need-ing employment should have three acres of land to be purchased by an installment of fifty cents per month. As the basis of exchange was land by organization; the products of land could be exchanged for articles made by the mechanic on the credit system. Mr. Ritchie was at Hotel Washburn Saturday evening to organize.

FOX LAKE, ILL.

The summer movement is com-mencing to be fairly felt, and large parties at the several hotels are be-ing constantly expected. However, not until the Chicago juveniles have graduated at their respective seats of learning, will the family groups feel at liberty to throw open their lawns and dining tables; unless indeed our future guests full victims of these disjointed times, to walking dele-gate, and go on a sympathetic strike about everything in general and nothing in particular. Meanwhile it may be stated that the larders are full, awaiting developments; the cooks are hired, and the waiters and waitresses being put through their trances on trials of speed and unobser-vant attention to likely customers. In fact everything is in running shape, not even excepting pineapples and watermelons, lying snugly in the cooler. All this, however, is some-what in a whisper, as some fear is for we had grown very fond of our cub.

Two months afterward an Adirondack guide came into one of the small stores of our village, having with him a little brown bear, around whose neck there was a buckskin collar.

The guide said he was going through the mountains when the bear ran up to him and wanted to play. He said he never saw such a tame bear. It was Jack.

Uncle John bought him and now he is in his back yard, but he is getting awfully big, and Uncle John says he will soon have to join some circus.—N. Y. Journal.

How Little Moody Helped.

Mr. Justice and his wife were pious people and strict members of the Methodist church. They were of the good old-fashioned kind and when at church and the minister said anything that really struck Brother Justice as being "just the gospel, the whole truth, something real good," as he would term it, he would clap his hands together with a hearty "amen."

And his children had got to looking for the "amen," whenever they heard the minister get in real good earnest and appeared to be getting happy.

They thought the "amen" helped in some way to carry on the meeting successfully.

It so happened one Sunday morning that Elder Justice (as he was generally called by his neighbors) went to church alone, leaving the children at home by themselves, as Mrs. Justice had been called to see a sick neighbor and would not return before evening.

"Now be very careful about the fire, and don't put any more wood in the stove, I have put in enough to last; and keep a good fire until I return," said Elder Justice as he prepared to leave the children for church. But he hadn't been gone but a very short time before John Wesley, the oldest, a boy about ten years old, saw a blaze of fire around the stove pipe. And being a boy of remarkably quick decis-ive principle, he saw that if anything was to be done, it must be done at once, so he sprang for the pail of wa-ter and the broom, dipping the broom into the pail of water then dashing the water up against the stove pipe.

Peter C. bringing him other pails of water from the cistern, while Mary pumped the water.

They soon had the fire put out and everything cleared up nicely when their father came home from church, and they all gathered around him to tell him of the fire.

"Well, my son, how did you succeed in putting the fire out?"

"Oh, with the broom and water. I just dashed the water up against the fire and soon had it out."

"Peter brought it to me, and Mary pumped the water for him to bring."

"So you all helped to put out the fire. You are smart, truly children."

What what did you do?

THE LATE JOHN JAY.

HE WAS A BORN PATRIOT AND LIVED AS ONE.

When the Slave Question Threatened the Destiny of the Nation He Was for Freedom and Was Promptly Pronounced a Howler and Crank.

FEW READERS OF the newspapers can have failed to note the unusual accent of sincerity in the expressions of regret that were published when John Jay died, within a fortnight of completing his 77th year. Expressions of this kind concerning a citizen so distinguished by his descent and by his long and active participation in public affairs were to be expected as a matter of course, which is as much as to say that they were expected to be perfunctory. But when they proceeded from writers who had known Mr. Jay they were not perfunctory, but were the state-ments of the charm which he exer-cised on all those who enjoyed his ac-quaintance.

Mr. Jay might have passed through life without taking part in its activi-ties. An ample fortune and the best place in American society were se-cured to him from his birth. He was a scion of one of the most distinguished of the colonial and revolutionary fam-ilies of New York, and the grandson of that John Jay, first chief-justice of the Supreme court of the United States, of whom Daniel Webster said, in a famous speech, that when the ermine fell upon John Jay it touched nothing that was not as spot-less as itself. His birth, his wealth, and his tastes seemed to designate him for a life of lettered ease. But his spirit was too ardent to permit sloth. Almost as soon as he had at-tained his majority he became an ac-tive anti-slavery man, at a time when activity in that cause was taken in re-spectable circles at the north as the mark of an unbalanced mind, if not as an actual brand of social disrepute, and he never faltered in his attach-ment to the cause, or in his efforts in behalf of it, until the victory had been won. Slavery disposed of he turned his attention to other causes that seemed to him good. He was one of the earliest and most earnest ad-vocates of civil service reform, and was appointed by Gov. Cleveland, the first member of the state civil service com-mission. The only consoling public office, properly speaking, that he ever held was that of the Austria under Gen. Grant.

When completed this is the largest barn in the

DIVED IN A STREET DRESS.

A Plucky California Girl Who Wouldn't Take a Dare.

Miss Josie Sheehy, a trim, natty young girl wearing a tailor-made gown and a jaunty bit of millinery on her head, was leaving the Olympic natu-ratorium in San Francisco, a few days ago, followed by the other members of the female class. Standing near the door were a number of young men waiting for the hour when they should be admitted, among them being Arthur Callan, an acquaintance of Miss Josie. Young Callan made a re-mark sarcastically reflecting on the abili-ty of girl swimmers in general and Miss Sheehy promptly retorted in kind. Repartee was exchanged laugh-ingly for a few moments, and at last Miss Josie said, unguardedly:

"I wouldn't be afraid to jump in as I am."

"I dare you," said Callan, as Miss Sheehy hesitated. "I'll bet you $25 you dare not."

The bet was promptly accepted, and the whole party returned to the swim-ming school. Despite his offer, young Callan had some difficulty in putting up his part of the stakes; but the $25 was finally placed in the instructor's hands, and Miss Sheehy removed the pretty little hat, that being appar-ently the most highly prized part of her costume. One of the attendants swam out into the tank to be in readi-ness in case of emergency, but he might have saved himself the trouble.

SHE TOOK A HEADER.

The plucky young girl tripped light-ly to the gallery, which is fifteen feet above the water, and posed herself for a moment. Then she brought the tips of her fingers together above her head. The next moment there was a splash as she dived, followed by a swirl of skirts as she dived, followed by a splash as the trim figure struck the water. The diver rose gracefully to the surface, and with a couple of long strokes reached the steps, up which she climbed laughingly to claim her $25. The money was turned over, and one of Miss Sheehy's friends is dispatched for dry clothing. Young Callan indignantly fled, and his last accounts had not reappeared at the scene of his discomfiture.

Do You Wish the Finest Bread and Cake?

It is conceded that the Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest of all the baking powders.

The purest baking powder makes the finest, sweet-est, most delicious food. The strongest baking powder makes the lightest food.

That baking powder which is both purest and strongest makes the most digestible and wholesome food.

Why should not every housekeeper avail herself of the baking powder which will give her the best food with the least trouble?

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sul-phuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

Certain protection from alum baking powders can be had by declining to accept any substitute for the Royal, which is absolutely pure.

Omo stands at the head of the list of states for having the largest number of farms, 251,430; Illinois comes second, with 240,631; Missouri third with 233,043; Texas fourth with 228,126; New York fifth, 226,233; Iowa sixth with 201,003 and Kansas seventh with 106,017. In the amount of area under cultivation, however, Illinois comes first, with 25,669,000 acres; Iowa sec-ond with 25,423,600; then Kansas with 23,303,301; Texas, 20,736,215; Missouri, 19,792,313; Ohio, 18,338,324, and New York, 16,389,380 acres. The returns of the census bureau furnish a surprise in respect to the amount of unimproved farm land in the eastern and southern states as compared with those of the west and northwest. It is a very re-markable thing that less than half the farm land in Maine and New Hamp-shire is under cultivation, while in Massachusetts 1,341,258 acres are un-cultivated and only 1,341,258 acres are cultivated. Taking the entire north Atlantic states, from Maine to Penn-sylvania, the total area of farm lands is 62,743,625 acres, of which nearly one-third is idle, while in the middle and northwestern states—that is, from Ohio to Dakota in one direction and to Kansas in the other—the proportion of uncultivated land is very much

THE GREAT STRIKE.
TROOPS AND MINERS ENGAGE IN A SKIRMISH.

ing force. The regiment is under waiting orders and may be sent home Wednesday. The only fear on the part of the troop officers in case of a conflict is that the miners may use dynamite.

The appointment of an arbitration committee from the citizens and the strikers is reported.

The miners had a secret meeting yesterday afternoon. After a prolonged discussion no decision was reached as to their future action. It is understood they disagreed as to the proposition to be made. It was learned that several wagon loads of provisions had been forwarded from Rochester to the strikers' camps. Sheriff Johnson says he has 250 deputies and can count on 500 in an emergency. Sixty of them have rifles and 100 of them have shotguns. He considers the situation serious. The miners of the country are looking for the fight to be lost or won here, he says. He fears the action of the 250 strangers among the local strikers. He says had not the troops been called out the town would have been in a state of anarchy and in possession of a mob.

Late advices from local strikers are to the effect that 400 men will assemble at Locust and Third streets to-day and from that point make an attempt to prevent the Penwell miners from going to work. Sheriff Johnson and a posse of deputies are to be on hand for any disturbance. The first regiment will be on battalion parade at the time and should the unexpected riot occur the battle will be fought in the streets of the city.

The camp is situated in an admirable position to reach all the coal mines in a few minutes. One-half mile northeast is the Springside mine, three-quarters of a mile northeast is the south shaft of the Penna Coal company, four blocks west, 1 and six blocks southwest is the Penwell shaft. One known camp of strikers is northwest and south and another southeast of the camp. The Penwell shaft is considered the most dangerous on account of the many Americans employed there. The men are said to be making fair wages and want to work if left alone. Many miners object to work under guard and say they will not work while the militia is here. Operator Broehl and Operator Overholt say their mines will be put in operation at once.

CAPTURE AND DESTROY BOATS.

Sheriff at Pekin Is Unable to Arrest Any More Miners.

PERIN, Ill., June 11.—An unsuccessful

which he has done. The sheriff of Tazewell county wires he has arrested thirty-three strikers. The militia is needed only to guard the jail.

UIGED TO STAND OUT.

Hocking Valley Miners Protest to Their Delegates.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 11.—There are no surface indications upon which to base a prediction as to what the operators and miners in their district conference to-day will do. If there is any desire to break away from instructions on the part of Hocking Valley representatives they have been doubtless strengthened in their stand against a compromise, for meetings opposed to any such move were held all over the valley to-day and resolutions to that effect telegraphed to their delegates here. President Mc Bride refuses to commit himself in any way, but it is plain from his manner that he is not sure of a compromise. The feeling among the miners is overwhelmingly against a compromise.

New York, June 11.—It is generally believed in this city by men who are representatives of bituminous coal mines that the end of the great strike is now in sight. They reason that when fighting commences between strikers and officers of the law there is no doubt as to a quick settlement in favor of the employers.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 11.—The miners and operators were in session all day yesterday, but no agreement was reached. The conference adjourned subject to the call of President McGregor of the Miners' union, but it is safe to say that no more conferences will be held. The miners have decided to send delegations into Kansas to induce the workmen there to quit.

Mayor Hayward Expects Trouble.

PANA, Ill., June 11.—Mayor W. E. Hayward says he thinks the trouble is not yet at an end; that the presence of the soldiers is only delaying the war and that there is enough of the anarchistic element in the community to tear things loose at any moment.

The strikers, in justifying their actions, say they have been receiving only 50 cents a day for their work. One man, who has been in the business nineteen years, said he was able to earn only $3 or $4 a week at present prices.

Late last night a meeting of the city council was in session conferring with State Attorney Creighton on the question of sending a force to disperse the strikers at the different

Jones were yesterday morning released from jail. They were met at the door of the jail by Oklahoma Sam, driving four horses attached to Coxey's phaeton. The four proceeded to the National hotel, where they shook hands with the clerk and a few friends who happened to be present. After spending a quarter of an hour in the hotel they started for the Coxey camp in Bladensburg.

Woman's Trial to Begin To-Day.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The trial of Erastus Wiman will begin to-day in the court of Oyer and Terminer. It is probable that the case will occupy Justice Barrett's attention for the remainder of the June term, being an involved one. The charges of forgery are made by R. G. Dun, by whom Mr. Wiman was engaged at a high salary. It is said that the defense will try to show that Mr. Wiman's offense was merely a technical one, if that, and that his arrest and trial are persecutions.

Rains Break Severe Iowa Drought.

KEOKUK, Iowa, June 11.—The drought in southeastern Iowa and western Illinois was broken at 9:30 last night, at which hour it began raining hard, and continued during the greater part of the night.

Four Dodge, Iowa, June 11.—The severest drought this part of Iowa has ever experienced at this season of the year was broken yesterday by a good shower. Small grain has suffered, but corn is promising.

Says Colorado Is Very Ill.

LONDON, June 11.—Chief Justice Coleridge, who has been seriously ill for some time, passed a very bad night and is much exhausted this evening. It is feared that the distinguished jurist can not long survive, though the physicians will not make an alarming admission.

Late Returns from Oregon Election.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 11.—Complete returns from twenty-five counties and nearly complete returns from the remaining seven give the following vote for governor: Lord (rep.), 40,030; Pierce (pop.), 25,451; Galloway (dem.), 10,575; Kennedy (pro.), 15,020. Lord's plurality, 14,539.

COUNTY SEAT NEWS.

Dr. A. Lewis is quite sick.
$203 has been paid in taxes on dogs.

The tax sale occurs in about a week.

Waukegan people visited the lakes Sunday in large numbers.

A culvert will be built on Buttrick street, at a cost of something over $1,000.

Peter Hasbrouck, who has been in jail for some time on several indictments, is out on $500 bail.

Mr. Mulhall, of the Security Bank, has returned from a three weeks' business trip to Iowa.

The coal strike is effecting Waukegan factories. One coal dealer has had several carloads get into the hands of strikers.

Indications are favorable to the location of the Lanz-Owen Leather Factory south of this city. One half of the number of lots asked have been subscribed.

Next week will be graduation week. The graduates are fourteen in number. Field Day will be Wednesday. The reception of the class of 1894 will be held at the residence of Hon. R. W. Coon.

Mrs. Lewis, wife of Dr. A. Lewis, died Saturday night, after an illness of two months. She was a highly respected and well known lady, having lived here for many years. Funeral from the house at 10 a. m. Tuesday.

A $70,000 water system will be forth-coming. Assessments have been adjusted. The system has been confirmed by the city council and work will soon be commenced, giving employment to several of the unemployed.

The death of Robt. H. Parks, occurring in New York, reached this city Friday. Mr. Parks spent his last days in New York, where he was anxious to get home. The day near the scene of the explosion and as she passed she met number of people of all classes rushing from the village to learn the cause of the commotion.

For a moment she stood amongst them, listening to the expressions of alarm and wonder that were freely indulged in on all hands as the people rushed round the site of the explosion.

Presently, to her astonishment, Mary recognized Hamer. He was moving actively about, searching everywhere among the debris, indulging in loud exclamations of astonishment and curiosity as to what had happened. After awhile, Mary observed two more of the men, whose manner and looks were in striking contrast to the easy indifference of Hamer. They were pale, and it struck the girl that they were searching for what they feared to find. They stood for a moment in conference, and the girl judged from Hamer's gestures that he was endeavoring to reassure the other two.

When they separated, Mary moved to a point where she could intercept them, and then she approached them unobserved.

Just as she reached them she overheard Hamer say to the others:

"Nonsense, men. Go away and sink your fears in a pot of ale, and find some Dutch courage if you can't manage any of your own. How the devil can either of them have escaped? The girl hadn't a notion of the plant, and she was bound hand and foot, even if she had; while that white-livered coward, Prawle, couldn't have got back his few silly wits in time to tell her anything. What chance do you suppose you would have had if you'd been nursing that machine? Why, there wouldn't have been as much of you left clinging together as would cover a shilling. Bah! I've no patience with skunks. Dead tongues can't clatter, that's the long and the short of it."

"No, you're right, Jos Hamer. Dead tongues can't clatter. But you're not a murderer yet, for all your effort."

As Mary said this, she moved close to the three men and looked steadily at them. The two looked round as if wishing to run away, but Hamer returned her gaze steadily, steadily and defiantly.

"What do you mean? Who are you calling murderer? Who are you? What do you want bothering me?"

"That indifference may do with others, but not with me," answered the girl, firmly. Then as a thought struck her, she added: "All I say Gibbon Prawle is ready to confirm."

"The hound!" muttered the man. Then, suddenly: "What do you want?"

Mary now thought how best she could serve her lover, and framed her conditions in that view.

"I shall say nothing if by to-morrow evening all the men who were in the shed last night have left the village, never to return. Those who stop will find themselves in the hands of the police."

expressed on the part of our hotel people, that General Kelley, in view of these preparations, may make a strategic movement in this direction during the march to Washington, as it is known that a commonwealer, though lacking perhaps in statesmanship, is more than commonly endowed with appetite. A certain feeling of uneasiness will prevail until the danger is past.

Meanwhile the sun is shining gloriously on Fox Lake. The fishing, as usual, is excellent, and parties of anglers are seen daily busily engaged in their favorite pastime. The recuperator is here in considerable force, or what in California would be called the "one-lung tourist."

This is the gentleman who suspends the process of respiration in the city and never tires of explaining about the chemistry of the atmospheric compounds of Chicago, a sample of which recently submitted to a distinguished analyst, revealed the unmistakable presence of microbes and bacilli of the most malignant types and fin de siecle order, to which is also added by the microscope, witches armed with lances, riding on broom-sticks, and more than a suspicion of soot, with the naked eye. At convenient and sanitary intervals however, he rises to the surface, that is, comes to the lakes to breathe, seldom (unless reckless) venturing an inspiration before reaching Rockefeller. He wholly devotes himself to breathing, sauntering about leisurely, and contemplatively inflating his chest, and ever anon, in moments of breathing recess, exclaiming, How delightful! Gained two pounds since last night! Give me another glass of that water! Feel stronger already! Wish I could live here always!

And he is already casting longing eyes toward the wood-pile for exercise, when suddenly he remembers it is time to cork up his lungs, and once more he is whirling through the down town districts. He is a nice fellow to have though, as everything tastes good to him, and he makes you feel that you are living in the promised land, a fact only suspected before. His class is numerous and ever increasing, and God speed to them and their cheerful blarney.

Too late for last week.

Mrs. Anselm is entertaining friends from the city.

Miss Nettie Cleveland visited her sister, Mrs. Dykes, the first of the week.

Mrs. Hendee visited Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Hendee, in Waukegan, last Wednesday.

Geo. Battershall has purchased a fine watch dog to act as night watch in his store.

Mrs. White and family have moved to Elgin, Ill., where they will make their future home.

Misses Blanche and Barbara Ilson visited with Miss Bartlett, of Antioch, over Sunday.

Geo. Battershall's store was broken into, last Tuesday evening, and about $15.00 worth of goods were taken.

LAKE VILLA, ILL.

A number of guests are at the Lake Villa hotel.

Station Agent Berry has given up his position in the depot.

The residence on the Edwin Richards farm is now ready for the plasterers.

Our merchants are all stocking up for the summer trade and anticipate a good summer business.

Henry Schad is kept busy attending to the wants of his numerous customers in the hardware line.

Our popular baggage-master, Ira Snyder, is hustling every day, handling baggage for city visitors to the Lake resorts.

Wedding bells are ringing, and a couple of our prominent young people will soon join heart and hand, "for better, for worse, as long as both do live."

Oliver Hook, of Rolling Meadows, is visiting his mother, Mrs. Hook, in Waukegan.

Some of our lodging Mrs. Mary was pleased.

"I'm glad of it, that I am. I'll tell Savannah this very night what I said, and the sooner she packs the better. And there's no reason now why we should keep her. Where is she now?"

"I don't know. Maybe with Tom's father."

"More likely with Tom himself," said Mrs. Ashworth, speaking at random in her irritation, and having no particular meaning for the words.

"Mother!" cried Mary.

"Mary," answered the mother, imitating her tone.

"If you don't want to drive me out of the room you won't say such things as that," said Mary, quietly. "They pain me."

"All right, my lass, I won't say anything more."

She was fond of the girl, and had no wish to hurt her feelings. But she was very anxious to see her married to Reuben Gorrings, and was thus very often a most injudicious advocate of the latter's cause.

She went now to the girl's side and beat over her and kissed her.

"I'm sorry I grieved you, my lass," she said.

"It's all right, mother," answered Mary, looking up, and smiling. "I know what you wish, but it can't be. I can't marry a man without caring for him. It goes against nature. Try not to wish it or speak of it again."

She went out of the kitchen then, and thus the discussion ended, as all the talk on that subject did, by each keeping her own opinion.

The next two or three days were a time of great trouble to the girl. She recovered her strength quickly, though she was not able to go to the mill, and indeed was compelled to stop in the house. But what perplexed and worried her most was the fact that Tom Roylance only came once to see her, and then only for a short time, during the whole of which he seemed ill at ease and quite unlike himself.

Savannah Morbyn left the Ashworths' cottage on the day after Reuben Gorrings had spoken about it. She went away with scarcely a word, simply telling Mary that she was going, and where she had found lodgings.

"No. What of him?"

"Nay. That's what I would ask you."

"Is anything wrong, Savannah? What is it? Tell me quick. Don't

"Is anything wrong, Savannah? What is it? Tell me quick. Don't express on the part of our hotel people, that General Kelley, in view of these preparations, may make a strategic movement in this direction during the march to Washington, as it is known that a commonwealer, though lacking perhaps in statesmanship, is more than commonly endowed with appetite. A certain feeling of uneasiness will prevail until the danger is past.

Meanwhile the sun is shining gloriously on Fox Lake. The fishing, as usual, is excellent, and parties of anglers are seen daily busily engaged in their favorite pastime. The recuperator is here in considerable force, or what in California would be called the "one-lung tourist."

This is the gentleman who suspends the process of respiration in the city and never tires of explaining about the chemistry of the atmospheric compounds of Chicago, a sample of which recently submitted to a distinguished analyst, revealed the unmistakable presence of microbes and bacilli of the most malignant types and fin de siecle order, to which is also added by the microscope, witches armed with lances, riding on broom-sticks, and more than a suspicion of soot, with the naked eye. At convenient and sanitary intervals however, he rises to the surface, that is, comes to the lakes to breathe, seldom (unless reckless) venturing an inspiration before reaching Rockefeller. He wholly devotes himself to breathing, sauntering about leisurely, and contemplatively inflating his chest, and ever anon, in moments of breathing recess, exclaiming, How delightful! Gained two pounds since last night! Give me another glass of that water! Feel stronger already! Wish I could live here always!

And he is already casting longing eyes toward the wood-pile for exercise, when suddenly he remembers it is time to cork up his lungs, and once more he is whirling through the down town districts. He is a nice fellow to have though, as everything tastes good to him, and he makes you feel that you are living in the promised land, a fact only suspected before. His class is numerous and ever increasing, and God speed to them and their cheerful blarney.

LAKE VILLA, ILL.

A number of guests are at the Lake Villa hotel.

Station Agent Berry has given up his position in the depot.

The residence on the Edwin Richards farm is now ready for the plasterers.

Our merchants are all stocking up for the summer trade and anticipate a good summer business.

Henry Schad is kept busy attending to the wants of his numerous customers in the hardware line.

Wedding bells are ringing, and a couple of our prominent young people will soon join heart and hand, "for better, for worse, as long as both do live."

Oliver Hook, of Rolling Meadows, is visiting his mother, Mrs. Hook, in Waukegan.

Some of our lodging Mrs. Mary was pleased.

"I'm glad of it, that I am. I'll tell Savannah this very night what I said, and the sooner she packs the better. And there's no reason now why we should keep her. Where is she now?"

"I don't know. Maybe with Tom's father."

"More likely with Tom himself," said Mrs. Ashworth, speaking at random in her irritation, and having no particular meaning for the words.

"Mother!" cried Mary.

WILL SHOOT TO KILL.

A DESPERATE SITUATION AT PANA, ILL.

The First Regiment of Chicago in Readiness to Quell Any Uprising—Sheriff at Pekin Captures and Destroys Boats.

PANA, Ill., June 11.—The critical point in the coal miners' strike here is expected to be reached when the employees of the mines go to work.
Should the strikers attempt any interference the First regiment, which arrived here from Chicago early yesterday morning, has instructions from Adjutant-General Orendorf to shoot to kill. If the chance is offered, and many prominent citizens think it will be, it is expected the coal troubles will be brought to a head and the anarchistic elements silenced here. The impression among the officers of the First regiment is that there will be little if any trouble, and many think a call to arms highly improbable.

At the same time Col. Turner is prepared for war at an instant's notice.

into line ready to charge any attack.

ful effort was made by Sheriff Frederich and his deputies yesterday to apprehend and arrest more of the striking miners wanted on account of Wednesday's riot. They have caught the sheriff's plans and are keeping out of his way. His deputies went up and down the river in a pleasure boat, stopping at Wesley City, Bartonville, and other points to capture strikers and destroy rafts as well as arrest rioters.

The miners ran away and hid themselves in the hills so that it was impossible to find and get them. The posse succeeded, however, in taking three strikers and a number of fish boats. They were brought here for safe keeping. Two rafts were destroyed. Preliminary examination of the men now in custody will be commenced to-day. An effort will be made to have John Gehlert and others of the principals released on habeas corpus. The authorities here, however, expect to make out an unimpeachable case against Gehlert.

THE GREAT STRIKE.
TROOPS AND MINERS ENGAGE IN A SKIRMISH.

ing force. The regiment is under waiting orders and may be sent home Wednesday. The only fear on the part of the troop officers in case of a conflict is that the miners may use dynamite.

The appointment of an arbitration committee from the citizens and the strikers is reported.

The miners had a secret meeting yesterday afternoon. After a prolonged discussion no decision was reached as to their future action. It is understood they disagreed as to the proposition to be made. It was learned that several wagon loads of provisions had been forwarded from Rochester to the strikers' camps. Sheriff Johnson says he has 250 deputies and can count on 600 in an emergency. Sixty of them have rifles and 100 of them have shotguns. He considers the situation serious. The miners of the country are looking for the fight to be lost or won here, he says. Life fears the action of the 250 strangers among the local strikers. He says had not the troops been called out the town would have been in a state of anarchy and in possession of a mob.

Late advices from local strikers are to the effect that 400 men will assemble at Locust and Third streets to-day and from that point make an attempt to prevent the Peawell miners from going to work. Sheriff Johnson and a posse of deputies are to be on hand for any disturbance. The First regiment will be on battalion parade at the time and should the unexpected riot occur the battle will be fought in the streets of the city.

The camp is situated in an admirable position to reach all the coal mines in a few minutes. One-half mile northeast is the Springside mine, three-quarters of a mile northeast is the north shaft of the Pana Coal company, four blocks west is the Pana Coal company shaft No. 1, and six blocks southwest is the Peawell shaft. One known camp of strikers is northwest, and south and another southeast of the camp. The Peawell shaft is considered the most dangerous on account of the many Americans employed there. The men are said to be making fair wages and want to work if left alone. Many miners object to work under guard and say they will not work while the militia is here. Operator Broehl and Operator Overholt say their mines will be put in operation at once.

THE OLD MILL MYSTERY

By Arthur W. Marchmont, B. A.

Author of "Miser Hoadley's Secret," "Madeline Power," "By Whose Hand," "The Last," etc., etc.

Mary was the first to recover her self-possession, and rose from the ground with a feeling of intense thankfulness to God for the escape which she had had from death. Gibbon Praxie was unable to rise for some time; but Mary, when once she had satisfied herself that he was unhurt, felt that she need not stay longer with him. "You can get home now, Gibbon, can't you?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied somewhat faintly. "Are you going?"

"Yes, I want to get home. Mother will wonder where I am, and this explosion will frighten her."

"Mary," he called to her, as she was moving away, "are you going to say anything about what you heard to-night? or will you leave it to me?"

"Those men tried to take my life," exclaimed the girl, shuddering. "I had done them no harm, and should have done nothing. But now I shall make no promises."

"Don't bring me into it, lass," whined the man. "Let me be a witness to bear out what you say. I know all the details. I could fix it on the others there."

The girl's lip curved in her scorn at the man's cowardice. "I have saved your life for you; for the rest, you must take your chance with the others."

"Spare me, Mary, for God's sake don't bring me into it," he called to her as she walked away, and when she did not answer he fell back on the ground and almost went into his alarm.

By the side of the mill, she was anxious to get home. The night was dark, and she passed the scene of the explosion, and as she passed she met numbers of people of all classes rushing from the village to learn the cause of the commotion.

For a moment she stood amongst them, listening to the expressions of alarm and wonder that were freely indulged in on all hands as the people gathered round the site of the explosion.

Presently, to her astonishment, Mary recognized Hamer. He was moving actively about, searching everywhere among the debris, indulging in loud exclamations of astonishment and curiosity as to what had happened. After awhile, Mary observed two more of the men, whose manner and looks were in striking contrast to the easy indifference of Hamer. They were pale, and it struck the girl that they were searching for what they feared to find. They stood for a moment in conference, and the girl judged from Hamer's gestures that he was endeavoring to reassure the other two.

When they separated, Mary moved to a point where she could intercept them, and then she approached them unobserved.

Just as she reached them she overheard Hamer say to the others:

"Nonsense, men. Go away and sink your fears in a pot of ale, and find some Dutch courage if you can't manage any of your own. How the devil can either of them have escaped? The girl hadn't a notion of the plant, and she was bound hand and foot, even if she had; while that white-livered coward, Praxie, couldn't have got back his few silly wits in time to tell her anything. What chance do you suppose you would have had if you'd been nursing that machine? Why, there wouldn't have been as much of you left clinging together as would cover a shilling. Bah! I've no patience with skunks. Dead tongues can't clatter, that's the long and the short of it."

"No, you're right, Jos Hamer. Dead tongues can't clatter. But you're not a murderer yet, for all your effort."

As Mary said this, she moved close to the three men and looked steadily at them. The two looked round as if wishing to run away. But Hamer returned her gaze sturdily, steadily and defiantly.

"What do you mean? Who are you calling murderer? Who are you? What do you want bothering me?"

"That indifference may do with others, but not with me," answered the girl, firmly. Then as a thought struck her, she added: "All I say Gibbon Praxie is ready to confirm."

"The bound!" muttered the man. Then, suddenly: "What do you want?"

Mary now thought how best she could serve her lover, and framed her conditions in that view.

"I shall say nothing if by to-morrow evening all the men who were in the shed last night have left the village, never to return. Those who stop will find themselves in the hands of the police."

CHAPTER XII.

"THEY SAY THAT TOM ROYALANCE IS A THIEF." On the following day Mary was unable to go to the mill. The strain and the excitement of the previous night had made her ill, and she had to keep her bed. In the evening she was worse, and for some days she suffered from a species of low fever. On the third day Savannah told her that the strike was over and that several of the more prominent strikers had left the village.

"Has Gibbon Praxie gone with the rest?" she asked.

"No," answered Savannah. "I hear that he's been round to Gorringe to beg to be taken back again. But, of course, he isn't to be."

"I should think not," cried Mary, "after having been the cause of all the trouble."

"Gorringe is in high spirits at having beaten the men," said Savannah. "He thinks he's done it all. That's always the way with your masterful men."

"I'm glad he's won," said Mary. She had noticed a change in Savannah's manner towards her during the days she had been shut up by her illness, and it had made her thoughtful.

"Why are you glad? Do you like him?" asked Savannah, quickly, looking keenly and searchingly at Mary.

"Like him? What has that to do with the strike? I am glad, because if he had not won the strike would have had to go on indefinitely. He would never have given in."

"Ugh! Sometimes I hate him!" cried Savannah, flashing out into sudden rage. "He's a devil!"

"Savannah!" exclaimed Mary, in astonishment at the other's quick vehemence. "Why, what has he done to make you say that?"

"I hate him!" cried the girl again, the anger flashing out of the depths of her dark blue eyes while her face crimsoned with passion. "I hate him! If I had a chance I'd kill him!"

"Savannah, what is it? What has he done to you to make you like this to him?" said Mary, gently laying her hand on the other's.

"What has he done? Why, he—But what is it to you?" she cried, snatching her hand from Mary's, and turning on her with quick impetuous fury. "What do you come sneaking and trying to catch me tripping for, and saying that which you think will give you a hold over me, with your fawning touch and your false softness? You are all false. You are all against me. You are all devils together. But you don't catch me tripping—not till I had my way and my own purpose. So don't you think it, and with a loud, mocking laugh she hurried out of the room, leaving Mary full of wonderment and fear at her strange words and stranger manner.

But Mary in the days of her illness had a greater trouble than Savannah's eccentricity. Tom came only very seldom to the cottage to ask after her; and in all the week that she lay in bed she did not once see him.

She saw Reuben Gorringe before she saw Tom. He had called at the cottage every day when he had heard of her illness, and he brought her fruit and flowers and delicacies.

"You have been ill, indeed," he said, taking her hand, and looking into her eyes with a look of grave concern on his dark face.

"And you have been winning battles over the men," she said, and smiled, not very brightly, although the man's sympathy touched her.

"Yes, we have won. But it is as much your victory as mine," he said.

"Why? What do you mean?" This with a quick look.

"That you took the same side as I. If you had gone against me I should not have attempted to fight. You are all in all to me still, Mary."

The girl's rather pale face flushed under the look which accompanied these words.

"Mr. Gorringe"—she began.

"Stay, I forgot myself, Mary. I am sorry. I won't offend again. I know what you would say. But the look of you so pale and weak and feeble made me forget myself, and my promise—everything but my feelings. I am a selfish brute. But there it's past. Forgive me." And he held out his hand.

She gave him hers for a moment, and then withdrew it. She could not be angry with him.

"Now tell me, are you really stronger? I want to know that particularly; I have reasons."

"Yes, I am quite strong."

"What caused your illness?"

"I scarcely know. A chill, most likely. Caught on the night when that strange explosion took place. Did you ever find out what that was?" asked Mary, shuddering involuntarily at the recollection of the time.

"Never. But I have my suspicions."

"What are they?"

"I believe an attempt was intended to be made upon the mill and that in some way, how I know not, it was frustrated."

"By the way, will you tell Tom that the new mule frames will be in early to-morrow, and that the earlier he can get at them the better?"

"I will if I see him," answered Mary, not meeting the other's eyes.

"Won't he be in, then, to-night?"

"I don't know," she said, with a little hesitation. "If it's important you'd better leave word at his cottage."

"Oh!" was all the reply that Reuben Gorringe made; but Mary seemed to read in it plenty of hidden meaning. She blushed, and then, woman-like, began to make excuses for Tom.

"He has been so busy at the mill lately that he has not had much time to be here," she said.

"Nay, not at the mill," answered Gorringe, his heart beating high at the knowledge that Tom seemed to be neglecting her. "I have not kept him late once. He must have some other reason, some work at home, perhaps," he said.

But she understood the look he gave her when shaking hands, and she felt humiliated at finding herself in such a position.

When her mother came into the room she found Mary lost in her dreams.

"Why don't you marry him, Mary?" she asked, after awhile, when she heard that Gorringe had been in.

"Why should I marry him?"

"Why should I prefer him to Tom, mother?" was her reply. "If you think Reuben Gorringe is the better man, you're the only body in Walkden Bridge that thinks so."

"He's a man that knows his mind, whether he's better or worse in other things," answered her mother sharply; "and that's more than some other folks seem to do. If he gets a bite, he holds on. Look at his money, too."

"What of his money? He's only manager at the mill."

"Ah, maybe. But he's got a shed on his own account, and I warrant me, he's got a tidy sized stocking, and that it's pretty full."

"Very likely. But I don't want his money. I can earn enough to keep me, and I'd rather die a weaver-lass and naught else than wed a man I couldn't love."

"Well, then, set to work and love, Reuben Gorringe. If you weren't so precious obstinate, you'd have done long since, instead of mauling on with that Tom Roylance, fiddling and adding about and doing naught else. I've no patience with you."

Mary made no reply to this. She had had more than one dispute with her mother on the same subject, and there had been high words between them occasionally.

"Why don't you, do as I tell you, Mary, lass?" continued Mrs. Ashworth, after a pause in which she had waited vainly for a reply.

"I don't want to talk about it now. I'm not well enough," said Mary.

But her mother did not mean to give up her efforts to induce Mary to give what she regarded as the proper regard to marriage. More and more she turned against Savannah.

When Mary told her what Savannah had said about the plant, and the flowers and delicacies, she was pleased.

"I'm glad of it, that I am. I'll tell Savannah this very night what he's said, and the sooner she packs the better. And there's no reason now why we should keep her. Where is she now?"

"I don't know. Maybe with Tom's father."

"More likely with Tom himself," said Mrs. Ashworth, speaking at random in her irritation, and having no particular meaning for the words.

"Mother!" cried Mary.

"Mary," answered the mother, imitating her tone.

"If you don't want to drive me out of the room you won't say such things as that," said Mary, quietly. "They pain me."

"All right, my lass, I won't say anything more."

She was fond of the girl, and had no wish to hurt her feelings. But she was very anxious to see her married to Reuben Gorringe, and was thus very often a most injudicious advocate of the latter's cause.

She went now to the girl's side and bent over her and kissed her.

"I'm sorry I grieved you, my lass," she said.

"Keep me in suspense. What is it?" Mary spoke rapidly and eagerly.

"I don't know what it is," answered the other girl, not meeting Mary's eyes, which were fixed upon her face. "But I have heard."

"Then what is it? Tell me. You have come to tell me; why don't you do so at once? If he is not ill, and nothing has happened to hurt him, it cannot be anything very serious. Is he leaving the mill, or has he quarreled with Reuben Gorringe?"

Savannah bent her dark eyes on the other's face. At the look Mary seemed to feel a strange chill her heart, but she would not show it, and smiled.

"What I have to tell you will be a shock to you," said Savannah, deliberately. "Can you bear it?"

"I can bear it better than your mysterious silence. What is it they say, and who are they?"

"They say that Tom Roylance is a thief," said Savannah, in the same deliberate and impressive tone.

Mary Ashworth burst into a laugh. "Then they are fools, whatever they are," she said. "Tom a thief! The idea! why it's preposterous! Then her indignation rose fast. "But who are they who dare to take away his character? And what is it they dare to say he has stolen?"

"Money," answered Savannah. "The money of the sick fund of which he is secretary, and his accusers are the trustees. The money is missing."

"Shame on them!" cried Mary, fuming with indignation. "It's a cock and bull story at the best. Where is he?"

Savannah did not notice the question. "They say the books have been examined and are found to be wrong, and that there is a considerable sum of money which ought to be in hand, and that they can't get it. He hasn't it."

"Silence, Savannah!" cried Mary, with sudden, fierce energy. "I'll hear no more against him from anybody. It's all a pack of lies from beginning to end, and I won't have it even spoken of before me. Where is he?"

Without waiting for a reply the girl rose from the easy chair in which she had been sitting, and taking down her hat and jacket from behind the door began to put them on, her hands trembling and quivering with suppressed excitement.

CHANGE SAVED HIS LIFE.

Mistake of a Camel Which Bore an Ancient Grudge Against Its Master.

Revenge seems to be sweet even to animals. It is certain that they remember for long spaces of time injuries they have received. An instance of this is cited by a New York paper.

A few years ago it chanced that a valuable camel, working in an old mill in Africa, was severely beaten by its driver, who, perceiving that the camel had treasured up the injury and was waiting a favorable opportunity for revenge, kept a strict watch upon the animal. Time passed away. The camel, however, remained obedient and quiet and obedient, and the driver began to think that the beating was forgotten.

One night, after a lapse of several months, the man, who slept upon a raised platform in the mill, while, as is customary, the camel was stalled in a corner, happening to remain awake, observed by the bright moonlight that when all was quiet the animal looked cautiously around, rose softly, and stealing over toward the spot where a bundle of clothes and a berosus thrown carelessly on the ground resembled a sleeping figure, cast itself with violence upon them, rolling with all its weight, and tearing them most viciously with its teeth.

Satisfied that its revenge was complete, the camel was returning to its corner when the driver sat up and spoke. At the sound of his voice, and perceiving the mistake it had made, the animal was so mortified at the failure and discovery of the scheme that it dashed its head against the wall, and died on the spot.

Martial Astronomy.

Men may be good soldiers without being scholars, and it is also true that men may be amusing when they are weighed down by the gravest responsibilities.

On the evening before a solar eclipse not long ago the colonel of a regiment of German infantry sent for all his sergeants and said to them:

"There will be an eclipse of the sun to-morrow. The regiment will meet on the parade ground in undress. I will come and explain the eclipse before the drill. If the day is cloudy the men will meet in the drill shed as usual."

The sergeants thereupon drew up the following order of the day:

"To-morrow morning, by order of the colonel, there will be an eclipse of the sun. The regiment will assemble on the parade grounds, where the colonel will come and superintend the eclipse in person. If the day is cloudy the eclipse will take place in the drill shed."—Youth's Companion.

"Well, bring it on and let me see. I've tried your rum meat and rum vegetables and rum bread and a dozen more rum things you've got here and maybe I won't be disappointed in your rum punch. Bring it on and be in a hurry about it."—N. Y. Recorder.

"GOD SAVE THE QUEEN."

English Soldiers Who Vocalized Their Loyalty While Fighting Vainly.

Maurice Gifford sends to the Pall Mall Budget the following account of how Major Wilson and his party met their fate in their attempt to capture Lobengula. Mr. Gifford obtained the information from an Indian of the Insuka regiment who was present at the engagement. On Major Wilson and his party returning with Captain Borrow's reinforcements to the king's scheme in the morning they were received by a volley from part of the Inguba and Imbusu regiment, who had orders to take up their position on the road by which Major Wilson and his party could return. On receiving the volley Major Wilson retired into the bush toward the river, but he found his party surrounded on all sides by natives numbering from 2,500 to 3,000 at the very least. The orders from the Indians to their men were that on reaching Major Wilson's party they were to shoot the horses first. This order the Matabele proceeded to carry out effect Major Wilson's party keeping up a heavy fire all the time. The horses, which Major Wilson had tied together in a ring, were soon all shot. The Englishmen then lay down behind them and kept up a steady fire with such a good effect that they succeeded in driving off the Matabele for a short time, but reinforcements arriving from across the river, and as far as Mr. Gifford could gather from the Indians, the fight must have lasted some three hours. A number of soldiers were seen to be wounded, and their ammunition began to run short. Then the natives gradually crept closer, shooting anyone they could. The Indians describe Major Wilson most accurately by his dress and the hat he wore, and states that he was wounded in several places and covered with blood, while another wounded man stood by his side loading rifles and handing them to him. Major Wilson and his men fought desperately to the very last. The Indians said that as the supreme moment came the Englishmen who were still able to rise stood shoulder to shoulder, took off their hats, and joined in a song, the kind of a song that he, the Indian, had heard missionaries sing to the natives. The Matabele then rushed up, and while the men were singing what we supposed to have been "God Save the Queen," they were overwhelmed by the natives and assailed. The Indians estimated that the Matabele lost eight to every one of the thirty-four white men killed, and said that Lobengula's warriors lay round the dead white men like grass.

Laid His Wires Well.

The foresight Lord Rosebery displayed in arranging his matrimonial plans is illustrated in the following anecdote: Shortly after he had returned from his continental tour he was one of a house-party at Mentmore, a lordly pleasure house which Baron Meyer Rothschild had built for himself in Buckinghamshire. One evening, at dinner, the conversation turned on the exquisite decorations of the room. Lord Rosebery's observation to his next neighbor, by way of epilogue to the conversation, was: "Yes, this place would suit me excellently." When, seven years later, he had married the daughter of the house and was the owner of Mentmore, his friend, happening to meet him, reminded him of this observation. Lord Rosebery replied with assumed gravity, but with a tell-tale twinkle in his eye: "Well, of course you know the unexpected always happens."—Argonaut.

A True Scholar.

Theodore Mommsen, the famous historian of Rome, had not only the appearance, but the manner of a scholar. Once during the half-hour's drive from Berlin to Charlottenburg, the car in which the professor rode went badly off the track. The rest of the passengers alighted, and the stranded car was left until help could be found. Mommsen remained, reading his book. An hour passed, and the sound of lovers and jacks and the plunging of horses' hoofs aroused him from his reverie. With no sign of discomposure, he rose from his seat and went to the door. "Ah," said he, "we seem to have come to a standstill."—Argonaut.

Her Final Answer.

He had proposed to her in an extremely florid and luxuriant, not to say tropical and soulful, manner, and she had received it with laughter and merry glances. Naturally this course of treatment didn't improve his temper. "What do you take me for, anyhow?" he asked, furiously indignant. Again the provoking laugh. "I don't take you for anything," she replied. "I reject you utterly. Good evening, sir." And she left him to his meditations.—Detroit Free Press.

EDITORIAL DRIFTWOOD.

Matters and Things as They Appear to our Brothers of the Craft.

Indianapolis Journal: Have we a written constitution and laws, or is this a government of mobsters?

Boston Journal: A peribole slew Goliath of old. The German bill will meet its fate from a lump of sugar.

Philadelphia Press: The gold in the Treasury reserve barometer continues to drop. It presages a financial storm.

Chicago News: All the senators want to get hot water at almost any old place.

New York Recorder: The Presidential candidate who expects to win in 1896 must have a triple-plated silver armor to his boom.

Jolet Republican: Make it Bland and Coxey and you will have a Presidential ticket about which all the cracks in the country can rally in 1896.

New York Morning Advertiser: Mark Uncle Sam one ahead. The Hawaiians have got New York Island and John Bull has not. It is all in the family.

Quincy Whig: What is a hobo, asks an exchange? A hobo is a man who voted for a change and got it, and now foots it to Washington to kick against it.

Minneapolis Journal: Governor McKinley's action in ordering out a large body of State troops shows that he isn't going to let mob law control his State.

Minneapolis Tribune: Northwestern crops never looked better and even though prices be low there will be something to sell in this region next fall.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Governor Altgeld's idea appears to be that a coroner's inquest must take place before the State can assume jurisdiction over a strike.

Des Moines Register: St. John will be a candidate for Governor of Kansas, according to dispatches. Poor old Kansas, it is to descend from Lowellling even to St. John?

Des Moines Register: Governor Altgeld is in danger of being expelled from the Ancient Order of Marchants on account of his action in calling out the State troops.

Ohio State Journal: Ex-President Harrison gazes fondly over into the Ohio pasture and softly sings: "Go it, Tom! Go it, William! I don't care who whips. In case of a tie my postoffice address is still Indianapolis."

Washington Evening Star: There is at least one sheriff in Illinois who is not afraid to "talk back" to John Pernicious Altgeld, who for some reason not yet developed, has been permitted to masquerade as Governor of Illinois.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The Democratic outlook does not brighten. The confusion at Washington is epidemic. The party is bewildered; Chagrin among the rank and file, passing from amazement to dismay, has culminated in disgust.

Peoria Transcript: The Populists are having a hard time trying to explain their votes in behalf of the sugar trust. Those votes were given of course. In exchange for concessions demanded by them, but their constituents will hardly be apt to ratify the bargain.

Brooklyn Standard Union: Why did the Louisiana Senators vote against the sugar bounty amendments? Because the Louisiana sugar planters got the 2 cents bounty on this year's crop, and an increase in market price of at least a cent a pound. That was the price—about $12,000,000—of the Louisiana sugar State votes.

Inter-Ocean: The government has recently paid $6,840,000 to the Cherokee Nation in payment for the Cherokee Strip. And this to furnish more free homesteads to the landless, following a line of policy inaugurated by the Republican party nearly a third of a century ago. And yet there be those who say nothing has been done for the poor man.

Commercial Advertiser: If United States Senators could make such an "example" of one or two correspondents at Washington that their successors would hesitate to interfere with Senatorial stock speculations by writing the truth about them, a real revolution in the Senate would be worth about ten times as much as one in the Stock Exchange. To be able to operate on the floor of the Exchange is an independent advantage compared with that of making tariff amendments to affect the price of stocks favorably or the reverse.

Philadelphia Ledger: Olemargierine is one of the few things upon which an internal revenue tax is levied under Federal statutes. The present tax paid by manufacturers of the article is 848 a year. This tax was imposed through the action of farmers whose business was affected by the sale of olemargierine.

Senator Manderson has introduced a bill in the Senate reducing these taxes one-half. It will doubtless attract the attention of the dairy industry, which has been powerful enough to secure laws prohibiting its sale entirely in several states.

A noteworthy event is recorded in the telegraphic columns of the Chicago Record. A report from Elgin announces it thus: "The dwelling and contents of H. W. Johnson were destroyed by fire, including $100 in money."

The surprising thing is that Mr. Johnson himself carried the news to town, from which it is evident that although his contents were destroyed Mr. Johnson himself still lives. The holocaust seem to have spared neither the purse nor person of Mr. Johnson, but only his indomitable spirit and the exterior parts of his anatomy. It is not unknown by the doctors that men have their livers consumed by Chicago whiskey; that others have much of their lung tissue consumed by the impenetrable and voracious bacillus of tuberculosis; that a man may bring himself about after the surgeons have taken a few slices from his kidneys and extirpated his spleen; but there is no case on record that will hold a candle to that of Mr. Johnson. The best warning is that a man should keep his contents saturated with water.—A. P. Commercial Advertiser.

Dr. A. Lewis is quite sick.
$208 has been paid in in taxes on dogs.

The tax sale occurs in about a week.

Waukegan people visited the lakes Sunday in large numbers.

A culvert will be built on Buttrick street, at a cost of something over $1,000.

Peter Hasbrouck, who has been in jail for some time on several indictments, is out on $500 bail.

Mr. Mulhall, of the Security Bank, has returned from a three weeks business trip to Iowa.

The coal strike is effecting Waukegan factories. One coal dealer has had several carloads get into the hands of strikers.

Indications are favorable to the location of the Lanz-Owen Leather Factory south of this city. One half of the number of lots asked have been subscribed.

Next week will be graduation week. The graduates are fourteen expressed on the part of our hotel people, that General Kelley, in view of these preparations, may make a strategic movement in this direction

during the march to Washington, as it is known that a common weal-ter, though lacking perhaps in statesmanship, is more than commonly endowed with appetite. A certain feeling of uneasiness will prevail until the danger is past.

Meanwhile the sun is shining gloriously on Fox Lake. The fishing, as usual, is excellent, and parties of anglers are seen daily busily engaged in their favorite pastime.

The recuperator is here in considerable force, or what in California would be called the "one-lung tourist." This is the gentleman who suspends the process of respiration in the city and never tires of explaining about the chemistry of the atmospheric compounds of Chicago,

a sample of which recently submitted to a distinguished analyst, revealed the unmistakable presence of microbes and bacilli of the most malignant types and in de siècle order, to which is also added by the microscope, witches armed, with lances, riding on broom-sticks, and more than a suspicion of soot, with the naked eye. At convenient and sanitary intervals however, he rises to the surface, that is, comes to the lakes to breathe, seldom (unless reckless venturing an inspiration before reaching Rockefeller. He wholly devotes himself to breathing, sauntering about leisurely, and contemplatively inflating his chest, and ever and anon, in moments of breathing recess, exclaiming: "H. H. H."

HAINESVILLE, ILL.

Farmers are busy now.
Mr. and Mrs. Fritsch are visiting friends in Chicago.

Mrs. Latisia Hendee is visiting in Antioch and Richmond.

Dr. C. C. Whitmore spent Sunday with A. W. Whitmore, Jr.

Dexter Cleveland is working at Gray's Lake, on the house of Dr.
Shaffer.

Mrs. Cora Wightman spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs.
Fenlon.

Mrs. Johnson, of Chicago, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wightman.

Miss Florence Druce is home again after helping F. D. Battershall in his store at Gray's Lake.

Cup Morrill has resumed the milk route again, and is now prepared to take the farmers' milk to the factory.

Too late for last week.
Mrs. Austin is entertaining friends from the city.

Miss Nettie Cleveland visited her sister,
Mrs. Dykes, the first of the week.

Mrs. Hendee visited Mr. and Mrs. A. D.
Hendee, in Waukegan, last Wednesday.

Geo. Battershall has purchased a fine watch dog to act as night watch in his store.

Mrs. White and family have moved to Elgin, Ill., where they will make their future home.

Misses Blanche and Burnice Hinson visited with Miss Bartlett, of Antioch, over Sunday.

Geo. Battershall's store was broken into, last Tuesday evening, and about $15.00 worth of goods were taken.

J. J. Burke, Mrs. C. B. Little, Miss Flora Harden, Attorney Case.

Miss Dora Simons was very pleasantly surprised Monday evening at her home by the members of the

of her friends marched into the

and were entertained right royally for a few hours. Rev. Clarence silver ten-pot, as a memento of their kindest regards.

A RESTING PLACE.

BY W. H. C.

I know a pool among the reeds,
A quiet restful spot,
Where the mud hen sits and the turtle breeds
And the noisy world comes not.
Ah, gently the long-stemmed lily nods move
As the wind passes over the reeds above,
And the midday sun is hot.

Just tie your boat in the flugs so tall
And bait an artless hook,
And let it out in the center fall,
Then don't fish hard, but look
At the lively life in the water car-
The million wrigglers sporting here
Or darting from a sheltered nook.

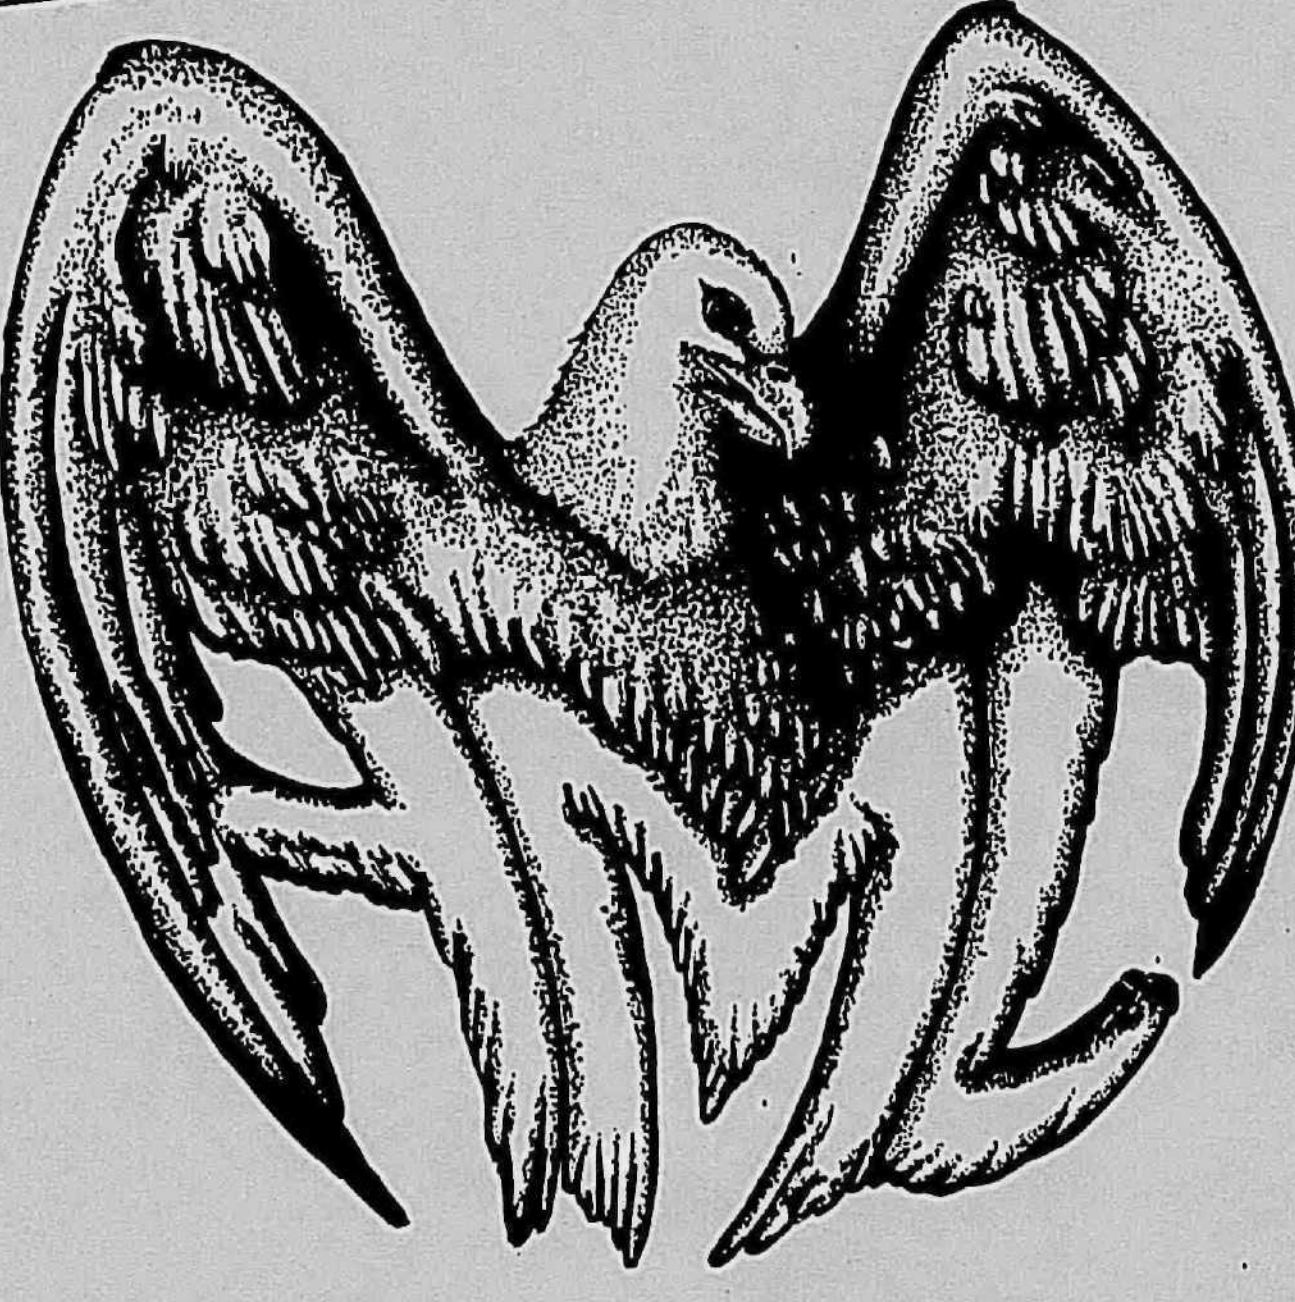

A blackbird teeters upon a reed
And chirps its quick, loud cry,
Or skims the pool with an arrow's speed
In a race with a big blue fly.
And the breeze in the rushes that shut you in Picks low sweet chords on its mandolin,
A weird and happy sigh.

My friend, there is rest and refreshment
There
And a balm for the weary brain,
And a surcease sweet from anxious care,
Then come, let us float where the lily-pads grow,
Forget the vain world, with its glories and
For the show,
And its struggle for glory and gain.

The above ideal spot can be reached by taking the Wisconsin Central train from Chicago to the summer resorts around Antioch, Ill. Trains leave Chicago at very convenient hours for city people. See full time card elsewhere in this issue.

Found a Cure For Sciatic Rheumatism.
Mrs. A. Inveen, residing at 720 Henry St., Alton, Ill., suffered with Sciatic rheumatism for over eight months. She doctored for it nearly the whole of this time, using various remedies recommended by friends, but received no relief. She then used one and a half bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which effected a complete cure. This is published at her request, as she wants others similarly affected to know what cured her. For sale

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For County Treasurer,
JAMES MURRIE,
Of Millburn.

"Cor." Breckinridge has drawn full pay as Congressman for all the time spent in his recent trial.

NEW YORK papers designate the removal of the Indian Supplies Bureau from that city to Chicago as trickery. It is a case of sour grapes.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, of Ohio, and Henry Clay Caldwell, of Arkansas, are proposed for the Republican nomination for President and Vice-President in 1896.

THE greatest death rate in the world is found in the city of Rheims, France, it being 28.62 per thousand each year. Dublin follows with 27.05, and New York with 27.27.

FOREST fires are playing havoc in Northern Michigan and Wisconsin. At and north of Iron Mountain the destruction of valuable residence, and other property is very great.

SENATOR DAN VORHIES favors the raising of all pensions to Union-veterans to $12 a month. Is Daniel sincere or is he fixing his fences for the next presidential election?

CHOLERA continues to spread in Europe and the far East. It exists in Mecca, the sacred city, at St. Nazaire, on the western coast of France, and in Lisbon, Portugal, and several points in Prussia.

Will anything be done about tearing down the American flag by "the Queen's own regiment" at St. Thomas, Canada? The only apology offered thus far is that "the men who did it were all drunk."

THE Eighth District Republican Senatorial Convention will be held at Woodstock, Monday, July 2, 1894, for the purpose of placing in nomination three candidates for the General Assembly. The total number of delegates will be fifty-four, of which Lake County is entitled to twenty-one.

J. J. Burke, publisher of the Antioch News, has associated with him Mr. Storms, a partner. The News always was a wake-awake and enterprising sheet, and that Mr. Burke has a running mate to suppose nothing short of a daily will not be their enterprising spirit. — Kellogg's Farmers' Auxiliary.

weather clerk furnished us six days of almost uninterrupted sun and the people thought it most appropriate for Chicago's World's Fair. The weather the country has been "enjoying" the past several weeks has been a special order for the use of the California Midwinter Fair?

THE Republican County Convention will be held at Libertyville, on Thursday, June 21, 1894. The total number of delegates will be one hundred and twelve, of which Antioch is entitled to eleven. The Executive committee recommends that each town hold a caucus, at the usual place, on Wednesday, June 20, 1894, unless the town committee states a different time by posting notices.

MISS FRANCES WILLARD has returned the National Women's Christian Temperance Union her last two years' salary which she has received as president of that organization. She gives as a reason for this remarkable proceeding the financial depression in the United States. Will some millionaire Senator follow suit and donate his hard-earned (?) salary back to the nearly depleted treasury? We pause for a reply.

Late Sparks from the Dailies

Prendergast's attorneys have applied for commitment for their client to the insane asylum at Chester, claiming that the case was defaulted by Judge Payne not calling it up yesterday, the time set for hearing as to Prendergast's sanity.

The striking miner's and the coal operators have come to an understanding, and the big strike is practically settled. The scale agreed upon for Illinois ranges from 92 1/2 cents in summer to 85 cents in winter.

The Democratic primaries in Chicago, Tuesday, were ruled entirely by Mayor Hopkins and his policemen, and any one opposed to His Honor was not "in it."

President Cleveland is indisposed. The Dr. orders him to refrain from all exertion and predicts an early recovery.

"Cor." Breckinridge was expelled from the Union League Club, of Chicago, Monday.

William Walter Phelps is very low, with little hopes of his recovery. Wm. J. McGarigle has sued E. J. Lehmann, of Chicago, for $75,000.

EDITORIAL DRIFTWOOD.

Matters and Things as They Appear to our Brothers of the Craft.

Indianapolis Journal: Have we a written constitution and laws, or is this a government of misers?

Boston Journal: A pebble slew Goliath of old. The Gorman bill may meet its fate from a lump of sugar.

Philadelphia Press: The gold in the Treasury reserve barometer continues to drop. It presages a financial storm.

Chicago News: All the senators want is free sugar and free whiskey. They can get hot water at almost any old place.

New York Recorder: The Presidential candidate who expects to win in 1896 must have a tripple-plated silver armor to his loon.

Joliet Republican: Make it Blend and Coxey and you will have a Presidential ticket about which all the cranks in the country can rally in 1896.

New York Morning Advertiser: Mark Uncle Sam one ahead. The Hawaiians have got Necker Island and John Bull has not. It is all in the family.

Quincy Whig: What is a hobo, asks an exchange? A hobo is a man who voted for a change and got it, and now foots it to Washington to kick against it.

Minneapolis Journal: Governor McKinley's action in ordering out a large body of State troops shows that he isn't going to let mob law control his State.

Minneapolis Tribune: Northwestern crops never looked better and even though prices be low there will be something to sell in this region next fall.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Governor Altgeld's idea appears to be that a coroner's inquest must take place before the State can assume jurisdiction over a strike.

Des Moines Register: St. John will be a candidate for Governor of Kansas, according to dispatches. Poor old Kansas, is it to descend from Lowellling even to St. John?

Des Moines Register: Governor Altgeld is in danger of being expelled from the Ancient Order of Anarchists on account of his action in calling out the State troops.

Ohio State Journal: Ex-President Harrison gazes fondly over into the Ohio pasture and softly sings: "Go It Tom! Go It William! I don't care who whips. In case of a tie my postoffice address is still Indianapolis."

Washington Evening Star: There is at least one sheriff in Illinois who is not afraid to talk back to John B. Parsons Altgeld, who for some reason not yet developed, has been permitted to masquerade as Governor of Illinois.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The Democratic outlook does not brighten. The confusion at Washington is epidemic. The party is bewildered. Chagrined among the rank and file, passing from amazement to dismay, has culminated in disgust.

Peoria Transcript: The Populists are having a hard time trying to explain their votes in behalf of the sugar trust. "Those votes were given, of course, in exchange for concessions demanded by them, but their constituents will hardly be apt to ratify the bargain."

Brooklyn Standard-Union: Why did the Louisiana Senators vote against the sugar bounty amendments? Because the Louisiana sugar planters got the 2 cents bounty on this year's crop, and an increase in market price of at least a cent a pound. That was the price—about $12,000,000—of the Louisiana sugar Senate votes.

Inter-Ocean: The government has recently paid $6,840,000 to the Cherokee Nation in payment for the Cherokee Strip. And this to furnish more free homesteads to the landless, following a line of policy inaugurated by the Republican party nearly a third of a century ago. And yet there be those who say nothing has been done for the poor man.

Commercial Advertiser: If United States Senators could make such an "example" of one or two correspondents at Washington that their successors would hesitate to interfere with Senatorial stock speculations by writing the truth about them, a seat in the Senate Chamber would be worth about ten times as much as one in the Stock Exchange. To be able to operate on the floor of the Exchange is an insignificant advantage compared with that of making tariff amendments to affect the price of stocks favorably or the reverse.

Philadelphia Ledger: Oleomargarine is one of the few things upon which an internal revenue tax is levied under federal statutes. The present tax paid by manufacturers of the article is $18 a year. This tax was imposed through the action of farmers whose business was affected by the sale of oleomargarine. Senator Manderson has introduced a bill in the Senate reducing these taxes one-half. It will doubtless attract the attention of the dairy interest, which has been powerful enough to secure laws prohibiting its sale entirely in several states.

A noteworthy event is recorded in the telegraphic columns of the Chicago Record. A report from Elgin announces it thus: "The dwelling and contents of H. W. Johnson were destroyed by fire, including $300 in money."

The surprising thing is that Mr. Johnson himself carried the news to town, from which it is evident that although his contents were destroyed Mr. Johnson himself still lives. The holocaust seem to have spared neither the purse nor person of Mr. Johnson, but only his indomitable spirit and the exterior parts of his anatomy. It is not unknown by the doctors that men have their livers consumed by Chicago whiskey; that others have much of their lung tissue consumed by the impalpable and voracious bacillus of tuberculosis; that a man may drag himself about after the surgeons have taken a few slices from his kidneys and extirpated his spleen; but there is no case on record that will hold a candle to that of Mr. Johnson. The obvious warning is that a man should keep his contents saturated with water. — M. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

WHEN THE CIRCUS COMES.

My heart it glows 't' throbbin', with a thrillin', happy glow,
'N' the days o' way back yonder comes a-rushin',
over me,
I can see the clown a-winkin'—hear the rattlin'

Mary was the first to recover her self-possession, and rose from the ground with a feeling of intense thankfulness to God for the escape which she had had from death. Gibbon Prawl was unable to rise for some time; but Mary, when once she had satisfied herself that he was unhurt, felt that she need not stay longer with him.

"You can get home now, Gibbon, can't you?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied somewhat faintly. "Are you going?"

"Yes, I want to get home. Mother will wonder where I am, and this explosion will frighten her."

"Mary," he called to her, as she was moving away, "are you going to say anything about what you heard to-night? or will you leave it to me?"

"Those men tried to take my life," exclaimed the girl, shuddering. "I had done them no harm, and should have done nothing. But now I shall make no promises."

"Don't bring me into it, lass," whined the man. "Let me be a witness to bear out what you say. I know all the details. I could fix it on the others there."

The girl's lip curved in her scorn at the man's cowardice.

"I have saved your life for you; for the rest, you must take your chance with the others."

"Spare me, Mary; for God's sake don't bring me into it," he called to her as she walked away, and when she did not answer he fell back on the ground and almost went into his alarm.

ward became widely known as a heavy speculator on the Board of Trade in Chicago and New York.

A few of Wilson's commonwealers, from Montana, passed through here Monday night. They were escorted to the tramp house by two policemen and cared for for the night. The captain was interviewed and his views were found to be similar to Coxey's.

A reform lecture on the labor question was given Thursday and Friday evenings at the Congregational church, by Geo. M. Ritchie. His remedy for the ills that have overtaken us is that every one needing employment should have three acres of land to be purchased by an installment of fifty cents per month. As the basis of exchange was land by organization; the products of land could be exchanged for articles made by the mechanic on the credit system. Mr. Ritchie was at Hotel Washburn Saturday evening to organize.

FOX LAKE, ILL.

The summer movement is commencing to be fairly felt, and large parties at the several hotels are being constantly expected. However, not until the Chicago juveniles have graduated at their respective seats of learning, will the family groups feel at liberty to throng our lawns and dining tables; unless indeed our future guests full victims of the disjointed times, to walking delegate, and go on an asymptotic strike about everything in general and nothing in particular. Meanwhile it may be stated that the larders are full, awaiting developments; the cooks are hired, and the waiters and waitresses being put through their traces on trials of speed and subversive attention to likely customers. In fact everything is in running shape, not even excepting pineapples and watermelons, lying snugly in the cooler. All this, however, is somewhat in a whisper, as some fear is

CHAPTER XII.

"THEY SAY THAT TOM ROYLANCE IS A THIEF."

"On the following day Mary was unable to go to the mill. The strain and the excitement of the previous night had made her ill, and she had to keep her bed. In the evening she was worse, and for some days she suffered from a species of low fever. On the third day Savannah told her that the strike was over and that several of the more prominent strikers had left the village.

"Has Gibbon Prawl gone with the rest?" she asked.

"No," answered Savannah. "I hear that he's been round to Gorrings to beg to be taken back again. But, of course, he isn't to be."

"I should think not," cried Mary, "after having been the cause of all this trouble."

"Gorrings is in high spirits at having beaten the men," said Savannah. "He thinks he's done it all. That's always the way with your masterful men."

"I'm glad he's won," said Mary.

She had noticed a change in Savannah's manner towards her during the days she had been shut up by her illness and it had made her thoughtful.

"Why are you glad? Do you like him?" asked Savannah, quickly, looking keenly and searchingly at Mary.

"Like him? What has that to do with the strike? I am glad, because if he had not won the strike would have had to go on indefinitely. He would never have given in."

"Ugh! Sometimes I hate him!" cried Savannah, flashing out into sudden rage. "He's a devil!"

"Savannah!" exclaimed Mary, in astonishment at the other's quick vehemence. "Why, what has he done to make you say that?"

"I hate him!" cried the girl again, the anger flashing out of the depths of her dark blue eyes while her face crimsoned with passion. "I hate him! If I had a chance I'd kill him!"

"What has he done to you?" "What has he done to you to make you like this?" she said, gently laying her hand on the other's.

"What has he done? Why, he—But what is it to you?" she cried, snatching her hand from Mary's, and turning on her with quick impetuous fury. "What do you come sneaking and trying to catch me tripping for, and saying that which you think will give you a hold over me, with your fawning touch and your false softness? You are all false. You are all against me. You are all devils together. But you don't catch me tripping—not till I have my way and won my purpose. So don't you think it, and with a loud, mocking laugh she hurried out of the room, leaving Mary full of wonderment and fear at her strange words and stranger manner.

But Mary in the days of her illness had a greater trouble than Savannah's eccentricity. Tom came only very seldom to the cottage to ask after her; and in all the week that she lay in bed she did not once see him.

She saw Reuben Gorrings before she saw Tom. He had called at the cottage every day when he had heard of

"By the way, will you tell Tom that the new mule frames will be in early to-morrow, and that the earlier he can get at them the better?"

"I will if I see him," answered Mary, not meeting the other's eyes.

"Won't he be in then, to-night?" "I don't know," she said, with a little hesitation. "If it's important you'd better leave word at his cottage."

"Oh!" was all the reply that Reuben Gorrings made; but Mary seemed to read in it plenty of hidden meaning. She blushed, and then, woman-like, began to make excuses for Tom.

"He has been so busy at the mill lately that he has not had much time to be here," she said.

"Nay, not at the mill," answered Gorrings, his heart beating high at the knowledge that Tom seemed to be neglecting her. "I have not kept him late once. He must have some other reason; some work at home, perhaps," he said.

But she understood the look he gave her when shaking hands, and she felt humiliated at finding herself in such a position.

When her mother came into the room she found Mary lost in her dreams.

"Why don't you marry him, Mary?" she asked, after awhile, when she heard that Gorrings had been in.

"Why don't you marry him?" "Why should I prefer him to Tom, mother?" was her reply. "If you think Reuben Gorrings is the better man, you're the only body in Walkden Bridge that thinks so."

"He's a man that knows his mind, whether he's better or worse in other things," answered her mother sharply, "and that's more than some other folks seem to do. If he gets a bite, he holds on. Look at his money, too."

"What of his money? He's only manager at the mill."

"Ah, maybe. But he's got a shed on his own account, and I warrant me, he's got a tidy sized stock, and that's a pretty full."

"Very likely. But I don't want his money. I can earn enough to keep me, and I'd rather die a weaver lass and naught else than wed a man I couldn't love."

"Well, then, set to work and love. Reuben Gorrings. If you weren't so precious obstinate, you'd have done it long since, instead of mauling on with that Tom Roylance; fiddling and faddling about and doing naught else. I've no patience with you."

Mary made no reply to this. She had had more than one dispute with her mother on the same subject, and there had been high words between them occasionally.

"Why don't you do as I tell you, Mary, lass?" continued Mrs. Ashworth, after a pause in which she had waited vainly for a reply.

"I don't want to talk about it now. I'm not well enough," said Mary.

But her mother did not mean to give up her efforts to induce Mary to wed what she regarded as the proper cop in regard to marriage. More than once she had turned against Savannah when Mary told her what she had heard of

keep me in suspense. What is it?" Mary spoke rapidly and eagerly.

"But I have heard."

"Then what is it? Tell me. You have come to tell me; why don't you do so at once? If he is not ill, and nothing has happened to hurt him, it cannot be anything very serious. Is he leaving the mill, or has he quarreled with Reuben Gorrings?"

Savannah bent her dark eyes on the other's face. At the look Mary seemed to feel a strange fear chill her heart, but she would not show it, and smiled.

"What I have to tell you will be a shock to you," said Savannah, deliberately. "Can you bear it?"

"I can bear it better than your mysterious silence. What is it they say, and who are they?"

"They say that Tom Roylance is a thief," said Savannah, in the same deliberate and impressive tone.

Mary Ashworth burst into a laugh. "Then they are fools, whatever they are," she said. "Tom a thief! The idea! why it's preposterous!" Then her indignation rose fast. "But who are they who dare to take away his character? And what is it they dare to say, he has stolen?"

"Money," answered Savannah. "The money of the sick fund of which he is secretary, and his accusers are the trustees. The money is missing."

"Shame on them!" cried Mary, fanning with indignant anger. "It's a cock and bull story at the best. Where is he?"

Savannah did not notice the question.

"They say the books have been examined and are found to be wrong, and that there is a considerable sum of money which ought to be in hand, and that they can't get it. He hasn't it."

"Silence, Savannah!" cried Mary, with sudden, fierce energy. "I'll hear no more against him from anybody. It's all a pack of lies from beginning to end, and I won't have it even spoken of before me. Where is he?"

Without waiting for a reply the girl rose from the easy chair in which she had been sitting, and taking down her hat and jacket from behind the door began to put them on, her hands trembling and quivering with suppressed excitement.

CHANCE SAVED HIS LIFE.

Revenge seems to be sweet even to animals. It is certain that they remember for long spaces of time injuries they have received. An instance of this is cited by a New York paper.

A few years ago it chanced that a valuable camel, working in an old mill in Africa, was severely beaten by its driver, who, perceiving that the camel had treasured up the injury and was waiting a favorable opportunity to revenge, kept a strict watch upon him. Time passed away. The camel, however, was not to be trifled with, and one day, when he was watching

"GOD SAVE THE QUEEN."

English Soldiers Who Vocalized Their Loyalty While Fighting Vainly.

Major Gifford sends to the Pall Mall Budget the following account of how Major Wilson and his party met their fate in their attempt to capture Lobengula. Mr. Gifford obtained the information from an Indian of the Insuka regiment who was present at the engagement. On Major Wilson and his party returning with Captain Borrow's reinforcements to the king's schorn in the morning they were received by a volley from part of the Inguba and Imbusu regiment, who had orders to take up their position on the road by which Major Wilson and his party would return. On receiving the volley Major Wilson retired into the bush toward the river, but he found his party surrounded on all sides by natives numbering from 2,500 to 3,000 at the very least. The orders from the Indians to their men were that on reaching Major Wilson's party they were to shoot the horses first. This order the Matabele proceeded to carry into effect. Major Wilson's party keeping up a heavy fire all the time. The houses, which Major Wilson had tied together in a ring, were soon all shot. The Englishmen then lay down behind them and kept up a steady fire with such a good effect that they succeeded in driving off the Matabele for a short time, but reinforcements arriving from across the river, and as far as Mr. Gifford could gather from the Indians, the fight must have lasted some three hours. A number of soldiers were seen to be wounded, and their ammunition began to run short. Then the natives gradually crept closer, shooting anyone they could. The Indians describe Major Wilson most accurately by his dress and the hat he wore, and states that he was wounded in several places and covered with blood, while another wounded man stood by his side loading rifles and handing them to him. Major Wilson and his men fought desperately to the very last. The Indians said that as the supreme moment came the Englishmen who were still able to rise stood shoulder to shoulder, took off their hats, and joined in a song, the kind of a song that he, the Indian, had heard missionaries sing to the natives. The Matabele then rushed up, and while the men were singing what we supposed to have been "God Save the Queen," they were overwhelmed by the natives and assailed. The Indians estimated that the Matabele lost eight to every one of the thirty-four white men killed, and said that Lobengula's warriors lay round the dead white men like grass.

It is our earnest desire to impress upon the minds of the public the superiority of the service offered by the Wisconsin Central Lines to Milwaukee, Chicago and all points Eastward South. Two fast trains leave from Minneapolis and Duluth daily, equipped with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of the latest design. Its Dining Car Service is unsurpassed, which accounts to a great degree, for the popularity of this line. The Wisconsin Central Lines, in connection with Northern Pacific R. R., is the only line from Pacific Coast points, over which both Pullman Vestibuled, first-class, and Pullman Tourist Cars are operated via St. Paul without change to Chicago.

WILL SHOOT TO KILL.

A DESPERATE SITUATION AT PANAMA, ILL.

The First Regiment of Chicago in readiness to quell any uprising—Sheriff at Pekin Captures and Destroys Bonas.

PANA, Ill., June 11.—The critical point in the coal miners' strike here is expected to be reached when the employees of the mines go to work. Should the strikers attempt any interference the First regiment, which arrived here from Chicago early yesterday morning, has instructions from Adjutant-General Orendorf to shoot to kill. If the chance is offered, and many prominent citizens think it will be, it is expected the coal troubles will be brought to a head and the anarchistic elements silenced here. The impression among the officers of the First regiment is that there will be little if any trouble, and many think a call to arms highly improbable.

At the same time Col. Turner is prepared for war at an instant's notice. In two minutes the troops can be got into line ready to charge any strike.

Obituary.

The following obituary notice from the Union City Register, of Riley Hicks, a former resident of Antioch, who died at Union City, Mich., May 27, 1894, will be read with regret by many of our older residents, who remember Mr. Hicks:

Riley Hicks was born in the town of Angelle, Allegheny county, New York, in the year 1815, removing with his parents to Yates, Orleans county, in the year 1833, and on February 24, 1841, was united in marriage to Miss Eliza J. Coleman of the same place. To them were born three children, Elvira M. Smith, of Grand Rapids, the state of Mich., Van Alstede of this city, and Alma R. Hasbrouck, of East Leroy. In 1840 he removed with his family to Antioch, Lake County, Ill. While there he united with the Christian church, in which faith he remained during his life. In August, 1862, he enlisted in the war of the Rebellion, joining the 60th Illinois Volunteers. He served his country one year and on account of ill health was discharged in August, 1863.
In 1865 he went to Bristol, Wisconsin, where he remained until 1868, coming to Athens, Calhoun county, in this state, the same year. As he advanced in years and felt the labor of farm life wearing upon him, he disposed of his farm and removed to Union City, where he had since resided. Two years ago a cancer broke out on his left hand, caused from a couple of warts, and ten weeks ago he went to Oriskany, this state, where he underwent a successful operation, losing two fingers and the better part of his hand.
Owing to the giving out of his vital forces he could not recover from the severe shock, and two weeks ago Monday night he was taken seriously ill, and on Sunday, May 27th, he died, at the age of 79 years, one month and 15 days. The funeral services were held at his late home, Rev. H. S. Mills officiating. He was interred in Riverside Cemetery, Corbin Post G. A. R. conducting the last rites.

In all the essentials that go to make up a good citizen Riley Hicks was the embodiment of them all. He was one of those genial, kind-hearted men who had a kindly word of greeting for all, and his every day life was such as to commend it to the youth of our land. His earthly life has gone, but the practical manifestation of what he was will long remain in the hearts not only of those that were near and dear to him, but also to all those with whom an acquaintance was enjoyed.
He bore his sufferings with the true spirit of one who realizes the true condition of things on this mundane sphere. He labored for the good of others, forgetting self in his efforts to make them happier.
In the death of Riley Hicks Union City has lost a most valued citizen, Corbin Post an honored member, society an upright man, and his family a loving and devoted husband and father.

Of Interest to Theatre Goers.
"Charley's Aunt," at Hooley's, Chicago, continues to draw crowded houses, and well it may, for it is the funniest, most audacious ever seen at that popular theatre. No one can afford to miss seeing this comedy.

Frank Hall's Casino, Wabash

Chicago, is becoming more popular every day. The admission is but ten cents, more where the curtain rises at 10 a. m. and falls

at 10:30 p. m., giving the common stage performance. Billy Rice's minstrels are the leading attraction this week, and are the best minstrels ever seen in the city.

The music of the Casino is worth more than the admission asked. When in the city give the Casino a call.

When in Chicago visit the Masonic Temple Observatory and Roof Gardens.

Two Scenic Theatres, each 17 by 52

feet, have been constructed; these Bijou temples of amusement, beautiful in design and finish, are fully equipped with stage and seated with comfortable chairs. In one will be shown the mutations of "A Day in the Alps," this is the famous scenic theatre which was during the World's

Columbian Exposition exhibited in the Electricity Building, visited by over 250,-

000 people, and unanimously endorsed as second to no single attraction exhibited.

The other representation in miniature of the world-famed Grand Court of Honor of the World's Fair, the artistic masterpiece of the nineteenth century, showing with absolute fidelity its magnificent architecture,

prismatic fountains, MacMonnies Fountain

Search Light and Grand Basin, with real water effects. Continuous performances will be given on these stages and visitors are promised a rare treat in the beautiful scenes that will be depicted thereon. The entire roof of the vast room is made beautiful by a grand display of ever-changing colored lights. The admission to the Observatory has always been twenty-five cents, and it is estimated that a million people have visited it since the completion of the building. The addition of all these novelties for the entertainment of visitors does not increase this price. This observatory and Roof Garden is one of the greatest sights of a great city, and visitors to Chicago should not miss the opportunity of paying it a visit.

Boys, Take Notice.

A man who goes to see his girl

twice a week and takes her to places is legally engaged to her, according to a recent decision, whether he says anything to her about marriage or not, and she could recover suit for breach of promise. It is hoped that girls will take advantage of this decision and force the young men to marry them. Young men have a habit of loafing around a girl's house for years and then drifting off without saying a word about marriage. While a young man is loafing around a girl's house he probably keeps some one away who would talk business. This decision was also brought about in the interest of the young men who are too bashful to speak of their love to the lady they adore, but keep it shut up in their own small souls till it becomes a mighty power, too great for comprehension, then, at some unexpected moment, it will explode with just opposite to the desired effect.

How She Lost a Husband.

A very select party congregated at the house of Mrs. Whalebuck to celebrate the birthday of her daughter, the youngest of four, the fair Henrietta, who, at that time, had entered into her nineteenth year. She was beautiful, accomplished, and, of course, amiable; although she had no fortune, she was a jewel in herself. But to return to the birthday party. Henrietta played the piano divinely; William Javellin, the younger son of a country banker, looked very serious as the music proceeded. Mrs. Whalebuck noticed the gravity of the young gentleman, and, doubtless to divert it, desired
Henrietta to sing.

Henrietta obeyed, and sang in the finest possible taste. Had she been young up for the occasion, like a music box, she could not have outdone herself with more precision or with less vulgar impulse. Every note fell from her lips as if it were chiseled; and then her execution. Poor William Javellin—his heart was dragged up and down the gamut until exhausted, when, at the last three minute shake of the songstress, it fell into a thousand little pieces.

There was a general burst of applause, followed for a moment by a profound silence. Mrs. Whalebuck looked proudly at the young bachelors, but favored the younger son of the banker with a look entirely for himself.

In this pause a voice cried out, and it seemed as if accompanying the glances of Mrs. Whalebuck: "Does nobody offer?"
A titter, deepening into a laugh, went round the room, and Mrs. Whalebuck and Henrietta turned scarlet.

"Oh, ha, ha," observed the mamma, evidently restraining excessive laughter,
"That teasing bird, which Edly's grandfather brought him. How came it here?"
and the servant was immediately ordered to secure the intruder.

But the bird was a social bird, and resolved not to leave the party, hence, after many ineffectual attempts to catch it, for its leg, though weak, had been bound by some Samaritan, the bird was suffered to remain.

"It is downright cruelty to ask, but wouldn't this speak the banker's son," Miss Whalebuck, sing his favorite song, the "Cecilia," observed Mrs. Whalebuck for her daughter, and the favorite song, the title is not remembered, was rendered with incomparable power.

"Your only unmarried daughter," observed William Javellin in a low tone to Mrs. Whalebuck.

"All married except my dear Henri
